

"Two Rings of Gold"

---

He sits down on the barstool
And looks at his left hand
He slides it off his finger
The golden wedding band
It goes into his pocket
And as she takes her place
On the empty stool beside him
There's a smile upon his face
He doesn't think about it
The lie he's left at home
The mother of his children
Again cries all alone

Chorus

Two rings of gold that make one soul
They slowly melt away
And in the sacred bonds of love
One soul is two today
They cast aside the sacrifice of till death do us part
Two rings of gold that make one soul
Now lives in separate hearts

There's a suitcase on the dresser
At a house across town
Her clothes lie scattered on the bed
Her tears the only sound
She lays it on the nightstand
The golden wedding band
Today's the day that it all ends
This is her final stand
She doesn't think about it
She'll no longer be his fool
The children at her mother's house
Revenge her golden rule

Repeat Chorus

She knows the room they'll be in
Number two-fifteen
She checks the pistol in her purse
Making sure that it's not seen
She's waiting in the parking lot
There is no other way
And in the sacred bonds of love
Two souls are blown away
Too bad their story ends this way
A dead husband and his wife
She let the lover walk away
True love it has a price...

Chorus
